Auburn Therapy Associates (ATA) opened in 2020 during the height of the COVID pandemic. Over the years, ATA has steadily grown from a small, virtual-only practice into a group practice of 8 dedicated therapists working out of their office in the heart of Auburn. ATA is passionate about mentoring young professionals and students, expanding access to therapy in Alabama, and providing the best quality of care possible to the people they are honored to serve.

Services Offered:

ATA provides individual, couples, and family therapy locally in Auburn, and across Alabama virtually. Our therapists work with a variety of issues including anxiety, depression, trauma/PTSD, relationship struggles, parenting issues, substance abuse, living with chronic illness and disability, and more using evidence-based treatments, such as EMDR, Emotion Focused Therapy (EFT), and Trauma Focused CBT.

ATA accepts Blue Cross Blue Shield, offers discounts for private pay, and offers evening and weekend sessions.

Celebrating 25 years of arts and engagement in 2028, The Jule Collins Smith Museum of Fine Art at Auburn University is the cultural heart of an Alabama public research institution. Centered within the university's intellectual life and its diverse and fluid field of ideas, the museum welcomes co-learning – particularly students and faculty – across disciplines to explore the visual arts. Collection strengths include American modernism, stemming from the university's 1948 purchase of 36 works from the U.S. State Department's exhibition, "Advancing American Art," intended to promote notions of freedom of expression after World War II. The original acquisition includes works by Romare Bearden, Yasuo Kuniyoshi, Jacob Lawrence, and Georgia O'Keeffe; guided by that precept, the museum actively acquires, exhibits, and commissions work to expand cultural narrative and scholarship. Other highlights include Southern visionary art, work on paper depicting the South, Audubon etchings, contemporary prints and photographs, Mexican modernism, and pottery and ceramics.

Services Offered:

The Jule is Auburn University's art museum – a vibrant center for discovering new ideas and connections through the visual arts and campus collections. With free admission, visitors are welcome to see the familiar, delight in the unexpected and challenge themselves to know more.

United Way of Lee County has a rich history rooted in community collaboration. It began in 1953 with the Auburn Inter-Club Council, followed by the establishment of the Community Chest of Opelika in 1955. In 1988, these two organizations merged to form the United Way of Lee County, with Jude Peterson serving as the first Executive Director. After Jude's retirement in 1997, Becky Benton stepped into the role, leading the organization for 25 years. In 2022, following Becky's retirement, Tipi Miller was named Executive Director, continuing the legacy of leadership and service in Lee County.

Services Offered:

United Way of Lee County is the backbone of a broad, community-focused network, funding, and supporting agencies that strengthen education, health, financial stability, and crisis response. Through these partnerships, UWLC ensures residents can access food assistance, early learning programs, senior services, and other essential resources – when and where they need them. For many, United Way is the organized force that keeps our community stronger, healthier, and more resilient.
